SATURDAY MORNING, JULY 16, 1859.

THE PARKS OF PARIS -TRANSPLANT-ING TREES TWO FEET THICK.

Paris, June 16, 1859 .- I think you must ere this be tired and disgusted with the battle theme, which I am sure has been jingled in your ears and before your eyes quite enough to sicken you of the sounds, "killed, wounded and gunpowder." I will therefore try to interest you with a more soothing subject, attended with less excitement, commencing with the public improvements now in progress in Paris, which will add much to the beauty and comfort of the city, and promote the health of its inhabitants.

Additional parks are being constructed. besides extensive boulevards, avenues, water works, fountains, &c. The Champs Elysces, one of the most magnificently laid out grounds in the world, is undergoing still greater inprovements to add to its present fascinating attractions. Large trees are daily seen riding through the Champs Elysees, which are to take the place of old and decayed ones. It is a strange sight to see a tree fifty or sixty feet high, with a trunk two feet (!) in diameter, in full foliage, moving through the Boulevards on wheels. I have been astonished at the size of some of these trees that I have seen riding by me, and my curiosity led me about a mile outside of the city to see the process of taking them out of the ground which s as follows: A circle is cut round the tree about three feet from the trunk, and at a depth of about five, through roots and earth. The earth which adheres to the root is covered and bound with brush and rope, to keep all together, then large chains are passed under the whole, and the ends brought up above the surface of the ground. It now being ready to be removed, two heavy, strong planks are laid down outside of the hole, to receive the wheels of the wagon which is made of solid iron, and a skeleton body of only two heavy side pieces which connect the fore and aft wheels; the front wheels having an axletree passing from one side to the other while the rear wheels are bung like those upon many railroad cars, having one open space and strengthened by a heavy crosspiece of iron, which can be removed at pleasure. Over each wheel is a windlass to hoist by crank Now, being ready to take up the tree, the heavy crosspiece behind is removed, and the vehicle is backed upon the planks, and the trunk of the tree now stands up through the middle of the skeleton body; the end of the chains are made fast to the windlasses, and eight strong men, two at each crank, wind up the chain and swing the tree, roots and earth to the wagon, put in the cross-piece be hind, attach from four to six horses, and drive off. The tree is lowered into the earth in the same manner that it is taken out. In this way some of the avenues in Paris, which a month ago were exposed to the hot, melting sun, are now converted into beautiful, cool, shady walks, where one may sit at his case under the refreshing influence of the soft, soothing breeze from the Seine, and admire the beautiful scenery surrounding him. I doubt if there is any place in the world so beautiful in every point of view, as the "Champs Elysees." It embraces the finest parks and most exquisite flower gardens, fascinating promenades and avenues, spacious level roads for fashionable drives, magnificent buildings, excellent side walks, comfortable public seats (of recent construction.) In the midst of all these are decorations of art, comprising stupendous allegorical statuary, emblematical figures, numerous fountains of various design, sending forth their live- zette, New York Weekly Day Book, Richmond ly streams in every diversity of shape and size .- Corr. of the Boston Transcript.

THE RIVAL CAMPS.

been presented to the public eye than that | loway's Worm Confections, Hunt's Liniment, Bar contained in the letters from the two rival camps, which we published on Tuesday .--The Austrians and the French are traversing the same country by the same roads; the latter, indeed, follow almost in the very footsteps of the former, while neither side absolutely monopolizes the ordinary advantages of a march. If the French enjoy the sympathies of the population, yet the Austrians are the first on the road, and they are enabled to throw difficulties in the way of those behind them. They destroy bridges, or barricade towns, or face about occasionally and make a stand against the enemy in some favorable position. Every day, too, they are drawing nearer their fortresses and their resources, while the French are continually advancing from their base of operations and closing in upon the formidable lines of an obstinate foe. For all this, however, the contrast between the two armies and their proceedings, offers one of the most striking views that could be conceived.

Look at the letter from the headquarters the allies. The writer can hardly find words pictorial enough for the beauty of the country, luxuriance of its produce, the geniality of its climate, or the sensations of pleasure with which every soldier is penetrated as he pursues his march. The road lies through shady lanes, enlivened by the song of the nightingale, and adorned with the most charming flowers. After a few hours of easy and delightful exercise the troops arrive at the camping place for the night, where they find excellent provisions, all kinds of rural dainties, and a most agreeable bivouac. The next morning, refreshed and joyous, they resume their advance, only to go through a similar promenade with a similar conclusion. There is nothing of war about the proceedings except its stimulus and excitement. It is a "jubilee," a merry-making, a "fair," or anything rather than a campaign. The description reminds us of Robin Hood's men in Sherwood Forest, disporting themselves through pleasant glades, dining off good red deer, and sleeping at night on smooth turf under the greenwood tree.

Turn now to the headquarters of the Austrians. Our correspondent there writes from the same country, under the same date, and after a march over the very same roads, and what does he say? He can scarcely describe the sufferings, the impatience, or the disgust prevailing around him. The past week-that very period so agreeable to the French--has been a dreadful one. The writer himself, though strong and hale, and with the advantage of a horse to carry him, found the sun and dust "almost insupporta-ble." The wounded soldiers must have writhed in terture as the miserable, springless oxcarts of the country bore them slowly along for nearly twelve hours a day. The roads were nearly impassable. We published on Monday the official statistics of the Austrian losses at Magenta, as computed and acknowledged in Gen. Gyulai's own returns, and we can hardly give the public a more impressive conception of the case than by saying that a force as large as that encamped at Cobham was placed hors de combat in that one battle only. What can become of soldiers who, like the Austrians before the battle of Magenta, "for fifty hours did not get even so much as a piece of bread?" It is only a residue or a fraction of a force, under such circumstances, which can be relied upon for fighting, and it is evident that such conditions are likely to be created by the very measures which are taken to counterbalance

SOMBRERO GUANO

N calling the attention of the public to this val-uable and recently discovered deposit of this fertilizing article, we will merely state, that like all other phosphatic GUANOS, its most valuable constituent is phosphoric acid, or bone phosphate of lime; and that its mercantile value, as compared with other GUANOS of its kind, may be easily determined by the amount of phosphoric acid or bone phosphate of lime it contains. In order, therefore, to give the public a thorough knowledge of what SOMBRERO GUANO does contain, we beg to refer to the following list of eminent chemists in different parts of the world, who have analyzed difterent cargoes, from average samples taken by themselves from the cargoes just as they arrive from the island, without drying or selection of specimens for analyzation. Each analysis will be specimens for analyzation. Each analysis will be exhibited, if required, under the original signature of each chemist named:

50 BOXES TOBACCO, of various brands of each chemist named: of each chemist named:
